Boys who engaged in unseemly and depredatious pranks last night will have to face the judge today for their acts of vandalism. One serious case was witnessed by Officer Poup near the corner of Twenty-seventh street and Washington avenue. Some boys drew a wagon belonging to a Chinese vege-table peddler out of the alleyway and placed it with one corner projecting across the street car track, the vehicle being partially hidden by several poles standing alongside the rails. A south-bound street car in charge of Motor-man Bernard Strong crashed into the wagon and converted it into kindling wood. The car itself was also dam-aged. Officer Poup arrested Edwin Nelson, Newell Dantels is also implicated in the prank, and there are a number of others whose identity was not disclosed. James Ballantyne, living near the intersection of Washington avenue and Thirty-first street, telephoned for the police about 11:30 o'clock, stating that come boys were creating a disturbance at his place and were destroying his property. Ballantyne furnished the names of seven to the officers, and stated that he would swear out warrants against them this morning.
